A diferença entre o que fazemos e o que somos capazes

Como já nos acostumamos, pois, a olhar a realidade através de certas lentes teóricas, podemos ser, por muito tempo, incapazes de vê-la como realmente é.

Ensaio: Luís Cláudio Cicci

Anciã, moradora das Ilhas Flutuantes do Lago Titicaca, nas proximidades de Puno, no Peru, usa instrumento rudimentar para triturar grãos. Para fazer essa foto, esperei um bom tempo, sentado e observando a tal senhora. Até que percebi que era puro teatro. O movimento com a pedra durava enquanto os turistas dedicavam atenção. Logo depois de recolher as propinas, a impostora procurava tarefa mais importante.

O trem que leva turistas a Machu Picchu serve também como meio de transporte para os peruanos que vivem nos arredores de Cuzco. E o vendedor de sopas aproveita as baixas temperaturas para oferecer nos vagões lotados, com gente em pé e sentada pelo corredor, seu caldo fumegante, com batatas e macarrão. Cambaleante, driblando os obstáculos, segue o rapaz sem contrariar ninguém: numa das mãos, um balde de metal, cheio d'água, com os pratos fundos mergulhados e, na outra, outro balde, igual, lotado com a iguaria. A cada cliente, uma louça branca emerge da água para submergir na sopa. Depois do caldo sorvido sem colher, como se fosse uma caneca, o prato volta para o balde cheio d'água a fim de servir ao próximo comensal.

▲ Em Santa Cruz de La Sierra, na Bolívia, sapateiros trabalham com suas máquinas de costura a céu aberto, nos arredores da Plaza de Armas.

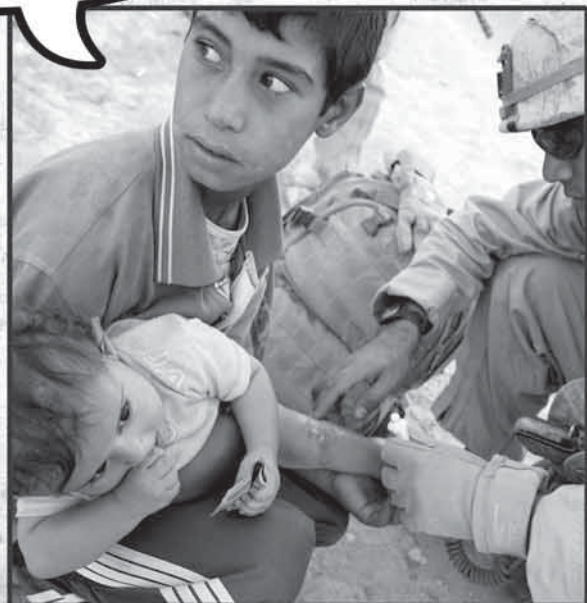

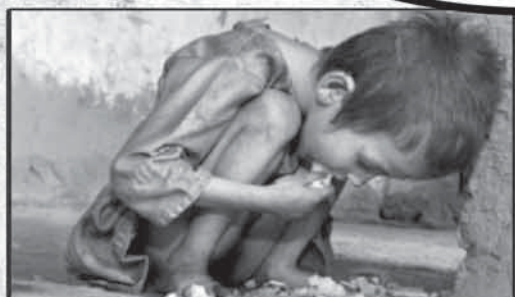

◀ Chola, mulher com vestimenta típica do altiplano andino, carrega carcaça comestível em estação à beira da ferrovia entre Puno e Cuzco, no Peru. Quase tomei umas pedradas ao fotografar essa senhora. "Gringo, gringo, por que me sacas una foto, gringo, gringo!", gritava a fulana. Com o escândalo, um sujeito que estava perto de nós, sei lá se marido ou amigo, usou as pedras da estrada de ferro para atirar em mim. Só tive tempo de fazer três fotogramas e apenas um ficou aceitável.

Em La Paz, Bolívia, a vendedora ambulante está dispensada de guardar o picolé em isopores. Graças ao ar rarefeito e às baixas temperaturas, o produto fica à vista, em cesta de vime.

Ah, se eu fosse banco...

Segundo o senegalês Jacques Diouf, diretor da FAO, 30 bilhões de dólares anuais - menos de 1% do valor despejado nos bancos - bastariam para recuperar a agricultura nos países pobres e evitar a fome e os conflitos que dela resultarão.
